ABSTRACT

Data are compiled on median student costs in a variety of categories: resident versus nonresident; separately for room and board, combination room and board, tuition and fees, and totals; graduate, medical, dental, veterinary, and law programs; the number of campuses within each $100 range for tuition and fees and for total student charges; and long-term trends. The campuses are listed that have not raised their costs in the last year. Institutions that have the highest and lowest tuition and fees, both resident and nonresident, are listed; similarly, those with the highest and lowest total charges are listed. Finally, an annotated table shows resident tuition and fees, nonresident tuition and fees, and room and board charges for the association's member institutions. (MSE)

INCREASES IN STUDENT COSTS PARALLEL
12-MONTH RISE IN CONSUMER PRICE INDEX

The median student bill for a year's attendance at one of the nation's major public universities will go up another 6.7 percent this academic year, almost parallelling the 6.6 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the most recent 12-month period.

The median total charge for undergraduate tuition and fees, room and board for state residents attending state and land-grant universities during 1977-78 will be $2108 compared to $1976 during the 1976-77 academic year. Information on median student charges was calculated by the Office of Research and Information of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC) from survey responses received from 154 four-year campuses holding membership in the Association. Data was received from all but five of the Association's 136 member institutions located in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

[1]These are the median charges for room and board at institutions charging separately for each of these services.

[2]These are the median total charges for room and board, at all institutions offering these services, whether charges are made separately or as one combined fee.

For state residents, undergraduate tuition and fees alone were up 7.3 percent compared with last year from a median of $647 to $694. For non-residents, tuition and fees jumped a staggering 11.1 percent from $1474 to $1637. Total charges for these students went up 7.1 percent, with median costs moving from $2950 to $3158.

All but four of the survey participants were included in calculations of median tuition and fees for undergraduates. Three of the campuses did not offer undergraduate programs. The fourth did not provide comparable information on charges for the previous year.

Tuition and fees for students attending graduate and professional schools of state universities rose much more dramatically than at the undergraduate level. Double digit increases were reported for both resident and non-resident students attending schools of medicine and veterinary medicine and for non-resident dental and graduate students. Other increases in medians were also above the percentage rises reported at the undergraduate level.

To complete the total charges package, the median rate for room stood at $600, a rise of 5.3 percent, compared with last year's median of $570 for the 69 campuses providing separate information on room charges. Board rates moved up a modest 2.3 percent at the 61 campuses providing separate information, rising from $733 to $750.

Combined room and board, including information both for campuses which charge separately for the services and those which have one charge for both, went up only 2.7 percent from $1373 to $1410. Information was provided by 123 of the survey participants.

The two primary reasons cited for increases in charges were inflation, mentioned by more than half of the survey respondents, and the necessity to maintain program quality, cited by better than a third of the reporting group. Other reasons indicated by about a fourth of the respondents included: The lack of any other source of additional revenue, an inadequate state appropriation and the need to make faculty and staff salary increases.

(The chart at the bottom of page one provides complete information on median undergraduate student charges for both 1977-78 and 1976-77.)

MEDIAN CHARGES FOR MOST GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION TOP $1000

All median tuition and fee charges for 1977-78 at the graduate and professional levels were above $1000 with the exception of charges for resident graduate and resident law school students.

The biggest increases were reported for students attending medical and veterinary medicine schools. The median charge for resident students in the Association's 18 veterinary medicine schools went up 15.3 percent from $872 to $1005. The non-resident median charge was up 12.1 percent from $2235 to $2506.

Median charges reported for medical school education, which carries the largest price tag in higher education, went up from $1215 to $1383 for residents and from $2624 to $2970 for non-residents. These were increases of 13.8 percent and 13.2 percent respectively for the 53 campuses providing information on medical school costs.

Median charges for the 25 dental schools included in survey responses trailed medical school charges only slightly. The charge for a resident student went up from $1210 to $1317, a jump of 8.8 percent, while non-resident charges rose 10.8 percent from $2589 to $2869.

Law school medians for 58 schools went up nine percent for resident students from $678 to $739 and 8.7 percent for non-residents from $1721 to $1871.

(The chart above provides complete information on median charges for graduate and professional schools for 1977-78 and 1976-77 and the amount and percentage of change.)

THIRTY-TWO CAMPUSES HOLD LINE ON ALL STUDENT CHARGES IN 1977

Despite the relentless rise in student charges, there were 32 campuses which held the line completely on undergraduate fees in 1977-78, including charges for tuition and required fees for both resident and non-resident students and room and board if applicable. In 1976-77 there were only 15 campuses which did not raise any charges.

The campuses included:

University of Alabama, University
University of Alabama, Birmingham*
University of Alaska, Fairbanks
University of Alaska, Anchorage*
University of Alaska, Juneau-Douglas*
Arizona State University
University of Delaware
Fort Valley State College
University of Idaho

+No board.

Two other campuses, the University of Arizona and Georgia Institute of Technology, did not have overall increases because decreases in one category offset increases in another.

The majority of campuses which did not report increases raised either two or three charges. Fifty-two campuses raised three charges while 34 campuses raised two charges. Only 11 campuses raised just one charge while 21 raised all four.

Looking at each category individually, the number of campuses reporting increases approximated about two-thirds of the respondents in every case. Among the 150 campuses reporting undergraduate tuition and fees, 97 raised charges for state residents and 100 campuses raised the amounts charged non-residents. Separate room charges, reported by 69 respondents, were increased on 39 of the campuses. Thirty-seven of the 61 campuses reporting separate board charges reported raises. Among the 62 campuses with only a combined charge for room and board, 46 showed increases.

The following campuses did not increase resident tuition and fees:

Auburn University, Auburn
University of Alabama, University
University of Alabama, Birmingham
University of Alaska, Fairbanks

Despite the large jump in median tuition and fee charges for professional schools, not all schools raised their charges. In fact, in most cases the percentage of schools reporting increases was about the same as for undergraduate charges.

The highest percentage of changes were reported by dental schools, with 19 of the 24 raising resident charges and 20 raising charges for non-residents. Approximately 70 percent of the 53 medical schools reported increases in their charges for both residents and non-residents. About two-thirds of the 18 veterinary medicine schools raised charges (12 for residents and 11 for non-residents) and approximately the same percentage of law schools reported increases.

STUDENT COSTS RANGE WIDELY
FROM CAMPUS TO CAMPUS ACROSS NATION

The amounts paid in total charges and for tuition and fees alone by undergraduate students attending state and land-grant universities cover a wide range. At the top of the scale in tuition charges for state residents were the Association's two private members and two members which receive some state funds but not in the same proportions received by other state universities.

The highest charge of $4350 for tuition and fees, reported by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was well above the $1910 rate reported for statutory colleges of Cornell University, which ranked second. Since MIT is actually the only campus included in the report which does not receive at least some funds from state appropriations, it should be considered atypical and is not included in the listing of state university campuses with the highest charges.

There were only 12 campuses with charges of more than $1000 for undergraduate tuition and fees. At the bottom of the scale, only 12 had charges below $400. As in past years, the majority of the reported charges were in the $400-$799 range. Ninety-three of the 151 participating campuses providing undergraduate data had resident tuition and fees within that range. The remaining 34 campuses had charges between $800-$999.

There was a much wider spread in non-resident tuition and fees. Although 97 of the 151 campuses had charges between $1000-$1999, the charges were widely scattered within this range. There were 37 campuses with charges between $1400-$1499, representing the only cluster within the range.

There were only five campuses which still charged less than $1000 in tuition and fees to out-of-state residents and only five with charges above $3000. The remaining 44 campuses had charges between $2000-$2999, again scattered widely within the range.

(The chart below summarizes the range of charges for tuition and fees, both resident and non-resident.)

Total charges, which were calculated only for those campuses which had charges for room and board, spanned a range of almost $2000 from highest to lowest.

The lowest total charge was $1388 the amount reported for total charges by the University of Puerto Rico, Rio Piedras. The highest charge reported, with the exception of the four private universities included in the survey, was $2956, the amount required for a year of study at the University of Vermont, Burlington.

It is still possible to get by on less than $2000 a year for total costs at almost half of the 123 campuses for which total charges information was calculated. There were 55 campuses with total tabs below that level. Forty-eight more had charges between $2000-$2499, with about half of that number showing charges between $2300-$2499. The remaining 20 campuses had charges above the $2500 mark.

Charges for non-residents reflected the wide spread in tuition for out-of-state students, spanning a range of approximately $3500 from a high of $5246 for the University of Vermont, Burlington to a low of only $1798 at Alabama A&M University. Only three campuses reported total charges for non-residents of less than $2000 while 20 had charges above $4000. Charges for the remaining group of 100 campuses were distributed fairly evenly between $2000-$3999.

(The chart below summarizes the range of total charges, both resident and non-resident.)

HIGHEST, LOWEST COSTS BY CAMPUS
FOLLOW TRADITIONAL PATTERNS

Rankings of the ten campuses of state and land-grant universities with the highest and lowest charges for tuition and required fees followed traditional patterns. Campuses located outside the continental United States and in Southern states dominated listings of lowest charges for resident students. Campuses in New England and the Middle Atlantic states and the three state universities in Michigan made up the listing of campuses with the highest tuition and fees for resident students.

The listing of the campuses with the lowest charges for non-resident students included five historically black campuses, two campuses located outside the continental United States and three others located in Southern states. Seven of the campuses with the highest charges for resident students also were among the top group in charges to non-residents. The two universities in Wisconsin and the University of California, Santa Cruz completed this list.

The campuses with the lowest total charges for resident students included six historically black campuses, three located outside the continental United States and one other Southern institution. Six of the ten campuses with the highest charges were among those campuses included in the listing of the ten campuses with the highest charges for tuition and fees. Three of the additional campuses included in the listing were located in the same sections of the country as others on the list. The only exception was the University of Texas Health Sciences Center at Galveston, ranked nineth, which ironically was also included in the listing of the ten campuses with the lowest charges for tuition and fees. Although tuition and fees were only $195, the institution charges $2500 annually for room and board combined, the second highest charge for these services reported by any NASULGC institution.

The listing of the ten campuses with the lowest total charges for non-residents followed much the same pattern as for resident students. The list included six historically black institutions, two campuses located outside the continental United States and two other Southern campuses.

The listing of the campuses with the highest total charges for non-residents included two campuses in New England, three from the Middle Atlantic region, two from the Midwest and three from California.

(Listings of the ten campuses with the highest and the lowest charges for tuition and required fees and for total costs are shown in the back of the report.)

TUITION, FEE INCREASES OUTSTRIP
RISE IN HIGHER EDUCATION PRICES

The NASULGC Office of Research and Information has surveyed its member institutions on charges for tuition and fees for the past twelve years. Over that period median charges for resident students have risen from $311 to this year's high of $694, an increase of 123 percent. The increase for non-resident students has been identical, moving up from a median of $734 to the present charge of $1637.

These increases have outstripped the rise in the Higher Education Price (HEP) Index, developed by D. Kent Halstead of the National Institute for Education. Over the same period, the index, which measures prices colleges and universities pay for goods and services, has risen 108 percent. The larger increase in charges for tuition and fees indicates that colleges and universities have been forced to rely to a greater extent on tuition and fees for income as other sources have failed to match inflationary cost spirals.

(The chart below shows medians for tuition and required fees, resident and non-resident, for each year since 1965-66, along with the percentage and dollar amounts of increases for each year. Medians shown are those reported in each year's annual report and do not therefore represent an exactly comparable group of campuses.)

TOTAL STUDENT COSTS KEEP PACE
WITH RISE IN EDUCATION PRICE INDEX

Despite the rapid escalation in tuition and fees, increases in total costs to students, calculated by NASULGC since 1969-70, have actually been less than the rise in the HEP index for state residents and have paralleled increases for non-residents.

Over the eight-year period resident total charges have risen from $1297 to $2108, a jump of 62 percent. Costs for out-of-state students have moved up from $1910 to $3158, an increase of 65 percent. During this period, higher education costs rose 66 percent, according to the Halstead index.

(The chart below shows medians for total charges, resident and non-resident, for each year since 1969-70 and the percentage and dollar amounts of increases for each year.
